

Annual Report 2011, Berlin

About 80 proposals for paper and poster presentations, including four proposals concerning symposia, were reviewed. One of the symposia was a joint session with Network 12. Slightly more than 60 proposals including the four symposia were accepted and integrated into the conference programme. Almost all proposals were presented at the conference in Berlin. Interesting sessions referred, for example, to ICT and self-regulation in learning, different types of video conferencing and uses in schools, many types of empirical research with both teachers and pupils, ICT-based innovation projects, and various theoretical contributions.
